

Carol Roehm, a member at large for MAWS and Bozeman Weavers Guild member for more than twenty years inspires others. She has held every office available in her local guild including president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and newsletter editor. She chaired many established committees and instigated the idea and chaired many other projects and committees.

Her interest in the fiber arts is not limited to spinning and weaving, but also to quilting, felting and along with many other areas of the art. She is interested in fiber preparation, dyeing and embellishments and has produced some outstanding one-of-a-kind articles.

She is always reading and researching fiber ideas and rejoices in new applications which she willingly shares enthusiasm. She has willingly taught these various arts in workshops and programs for fiber groups in her local guild along with other guilds in the state and at regional conferences. Many times she has been seen toting weavings and odd paraphernalia to conferences which she magically transforms into a marvelous display for her local guild. Her mind is always at work creating fiber ideas for others.

Her dedication to weaving stemmed from her mother-in-law's interest in the art. Thankful for this inspiration, she wanted to give something back so she took her mother-in-law's recipes and produced a cookbook which she sold to establish a scholarship at Montana State University. She has been a mainstay in the BWG throughout the years, providing much needed space for the guild "stash, filling positions, providing inspiration and instruction to anyone and everyone, and donating weavings to churches and other organizations. Carol Roehm is truly a fiber artist
